After the Training: What's Next?

What resources are available to your trainees after they have left the classroom and how can they access them. This presentation will focus on resources available at Public Libraries to facilitate Life-long Learning. Special attention will be given to resources in various accessible formats for those who are unable to use regularly printed materials. You can also expect to learn about free library resources available to use in your trainings, and possibly services where the Library might help one tailor training materials to employees with disabilities?

ABOUT JOHN PHILLOS

John Phillos is an Administrative Librarian at the Delaware Division of Libraries (the State Library). He has worked in public libraries in Georgetown and Delmar Delaware. While at the State Library he has supervised the Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, the Virtual Reference project, and has assisted libraries throughout the state with building and renovation projects. Before becoming a librarian, John served in the US Navy, and was an electrician, a blacksmith, a flight instructor and a commercial jet pilot.
